

Response from COSLA, dated 27 November 2012

Having looked at it, I'm of the view that it's a subject and at a level of detail that COSLA would not normally comment on. I'm unaware of any work or recent internal reports on related matters. Our road safety related work tends to be preventative. I suspect that those others that you have already identified are far more relevant and able to comment helpfully than us.

You might want to contact SCOTS (Society of Chief Officers of Transportation in Scotland - <http://www.scotsnet.org.uk/>) but, again, I am doubtful as to how much of help they may be able to provide. I tend to think this is more a matter for the police and PF.
