Letter from Police Scotland to the Convener

Review of public counter service provision

I am writing to clarify the position of Police Scotland in relation to the recently concluded consultation on Public Counter service provision and some comments that have been made during the weekend.

Sir Stephen House, Chief Constable, while giving evidence to the Justice Sub-Committee on Policing advised members that the consultation closed on the 31 October. This is correct and remains the position. However, he reassured members that work would be on going for the next 4-6 weeks in relation to final proposals and that the team would consider any responses that are submitted after the closure of the consultation and while the review of responses is underway.

I would be grateful if you could advise your colleagues of this.

Thank you for continued interest in this matter.
